The Parade

Ladies, gents, and children, buy your peanuts at the gate;
There's a circus on for nothing, and you'd better not be late;
A three-ring show is playing, and a side-show if you wait—
So step right up and get your seats. We pay to educate.
Six hundred strong, they come along, the troopers in parade,
They all are new performers, but they're none of them afraid,
Most remarkable collection that has ever yet been made!
Going through more circus antics than have heretofore been played,
So get your eyes in focus on the clowning in ring one,
For all the freaks have crowded in. The circus has begun.

RING ONE

See each clown go through his paces. How they tumble for your eye.
See the houses set a-blazing, watch each fire-engine fly.
See the girlies tight-rope walking on a silk thread, that is all,
How they dance and kick, not knowing, they should have a parasol,
For with nothing there to steady them, they're bound to take a fall.
See their arrogant assurance that they'll scale, in record time,
The topless, baseless, ladders that they balance as they climb
There's the unofficial booster, and it's lucky they allied her,
Inexperienced, but effective, she's a snappy bareback rider.
In a corner, flopping prettily, are grouped the singing seals,
While Hall, their patient trainer, with her baton, vain, appeals.
Mark the exit of the ring where stands the puppy-trainer, Hanna,
With two blue bull-dogs, she has taught to wave a college banner.
But best of all, the tumblers. Do not mind them, if they slip,
And over all the ring-master, Tall Teagle, cracks the whip.
Six hundred blind performers, all crazy to perform,
All crowding in the first big ring, creating their own storm.

Ring Two

The crowd has been thinning, by now we're beginning,
To see who is winning, a place in the fray,
For those on the tight-rope, have found only light-rope,
And lost even slight hope, of drawing their pay.

The players remaining, are rapidly gaining,
A pride in their training, and vie in their stunts.
How wild and how frantic, is each frenzied antic;
It's only romantic to try each thing once.

To sit on a table, as high as she's able,
And make it unstable,—ah, there's a hair-raiser!
She flirts, as she lunges, with death; when she plunges,
Don't mind. It was done just to see if you'd praise her.

See the lady with ease on the flying trapeze,
She's as safe as you please, till she loses her grip.
The clown, a bit heady, his wit quite unsteady,
Is none the less ready to fling off a quip.

Amid the false glitter, the Varney, a-twitter,
Shines bright, as befits her, a sun on the rise.
And it's rank understating, to say that the rating
Of Howell in skating, is skating thin ice.

A jig or a largo, in any old argot,
Hear Mammy boy Margot, Calliope Jane,
Spill songs with a feeling, enchanting, appealing,
From up on the ceiling to down by the drain.

See the muscular woman, titanic but human,
There ain't hardly room in the tent for her act.
Not the usual ninny, athletic, but tinny,
The scales and the Finny show guts for a fact.

Hear the uproar, and guess what. A thunderstorm? Yes, but It's just Sally Prescott, who's pushing her load.
She heads a committee to push around the city,
Some pretty, half-witty, young heifers that loved.

But despite these luminaries, the attraction rarely varies,
Their performance is the berries, if you want a flashy show.
They will hang by just one molar, and bi-cuspid to a pole or Come down headlong on a roller, though there is no net below.

And in the midst, the ever-guiding light,
The e'er effulgent, e'er unerring Wright.

Ring Three

Ladies, gents, and children, put your chewing gum away.
Throw your pop beneath the bleachers. Put your coat back on to stay.
Give ring three your kind attention. Let your interest ne'er depart,
For it's made the steep ascension, from mere show, to classic art.
There is hung a velvet curtain, while the music softly plays.
At a glance, you know for certain that you've come on better days.
You can stop your peanut chewing, take your kiddies by the hand,
For you've got the right impression that you're seeing something grand.
It's living statues, people, every player holds her pose.
It's artistic, but don't worry, for they all wear lots of clothes;
They pretend that they are naked, but they do not freeze their toes.

See revolving, on the platform, all the groupings as they stand.
See Diane, the nature goddess, with her followers by the hand,
Making sport amid the greensward, with some bare feet and confusion.
Though she seems to make a stir, that's living statues' best illusion.
Running round beneath the platform, trying hard to bum a ride,
Are the eager, earnest, scouting girls, who've formed a club Outside.
But they cannot join the statues, for their clothes they do not hide.
All too close to this gymnasium, is a mighty Athenaeum,
Called the Allenfield, where sit the blessed, that everyone may see 'em.
Simple scholars and free thinkers, who their inner thoughts will bare,
So their classic minds are naked,—(you don't see the underwear)

Then, among the living statues, who, alas! should never stir,
Soars a voice that shakes the canvas, knocks the groups from where they were.
Just slack your pose there, statues, your horizon's looking brighter,
When "Sonny-Boy" is rendered, by the golden throated Rightor.
Don't get back into position, for your poses don't enhance
Your youthful grace, when Burnap tries to lead you in the dance.
See the statues drop the picture, watch them scramble for their clothes;
Diane and the Athenaeum look alike for beaux.
It's the climax of the circus, folks, the funniest thing we show
When the circus-trained turn folksie, when they see a man below.

For the rest,—there is the side show; freaks fancy and insane,
Where, so I've heard, the only bird, that's not absurd's the Crane.

The Side Show

Side show! Side show! Do not miss a thing!
Come and see the famous freaks, veterans of the ring,
All the circus artists who have passed the three-ring marker,
Shifted to the side show tent, with Cooley playing barker.

Come on in. It's free!

On the right as you enter, the famous inventor
Of poems off-centre, Miss Simons, in pose.
Then, back where it's shady, is slumped Myrtle Brady,
Miraculous lady who writes with her toes.

Close by is Priscilly, (she's the nuts on a filly)
And though it seems silly, she swallows the sword.<sup>1</sup>
There's Babs Hall all tattooed, with the songs she has strewed,
In rhapsodical mood, on the monotone horde.

See the miniature room, furnished Scotch to the broom,
Ah! There's no place like Hume, for a dirk, kilt, and bonnet.
Miss Weimer, a rhymmer, (her prose is sublimer,)
Swallows needle and thread, and sews up a sonnet.<sup>2</sup>

There's Davis, fire eater, the hotter the heater
The more and completer, she swallows her traces.<sup>3</sup>
And Poggs, whose snake charming's so quickly disarming,
She's snaked this alarming verse from our embraces.

Get a look at the styles, that parade through the aisles,
They will call forth the smiles, once again to your face.
There's nothing that's beaten Buchanan's "doggy" feet and
The smart Betty Eaton, attired for the chase.

If you look for a treat, let the mud sink your feet,
In the vanishing street, which, though going, still clings,
Disappears in your face, as you stand in your place,
But your shoes bear the trace, of the thaws of the springs.

See the chapel where pray, almost every third day,
Some two thousand they say, so step up and extoll,
And it's known for a fact, that this chapel, by Act,
Is guaranteed packed, though you can't see a soul.

Say, from one in the know, it's a good high class show,
You'll be sorry to go, if you're here a few weeks,
But you'd better not wait, till they give you the gate,
Or you won't graduate, with your parcel of freaks.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Naturally you don't get the point because she's swallowed it, but that doesn't mean there isn't any point.

<sup>2</sup> This started out to be very subtle, because we got to thinking about people who swallow packages of needle and thread, and produce tailored suits, and knitted leggings and things, and it seemed to apply, but the whole simile was knocked for a cocked hat, when we found ourselves obliged to rhyme "sonnet" with "bonnet," for of course Miss Weimer never did no such thing.

<sup>3</sup> As for this one, we never expected you to get it anyway, but we were brooding over all the hot stories the head of Judicial Board must have tucked away, and—well, you can see how the whole thing came about. Or maybe not.

<sup>4</sup> And now, in case you are puzzling over what actually occurred during four college years, you will doubtless find something at least more lucid on the Nonsense Page. Oh, we see you looking quickly to see what page you are reading now, but you can't fool us, this is the Class History!

Words by FRANCES E. ROBINSON, '30

AND

Music by HERMION A. WHEATON, '30

In joy we sing, our new endeavor pledging,
Our hope as strong as are the walls above,
Tall ivy walls, that lend their mellow flavor
To the truth we worship, and the task we love.

Old roots are strong—beneath the turf lie covered
The tendrils of the past, unwearied, slow,
And thousands pass, as we must pass, unknowing,
Who come with years to watch our ivy grow.

In joy we sing, our firm devotion pledging
To halls and lanes where others soon will be.
Oh, guard them well, strong vines of ivy growing
With the strength that you have lent us to be free.

To 1931

We are living in a legend
 Past the gates, behind the old
 High walls that in their days
 Have heard a thousand varied stories told.

We have carried on the legend
 Sung our songs to you and passed
 Our duties down to you
 And given you our pins to wear at last.

And now we leave the legend,
 Leave the student life, the gay
 Tradition of old years at Smith
 For you to carry on another way . . . . . F. E. R.

To 1932

What have you learned, and what have you forgotten,
 What have you done, and what is your set task?
 Have you an aim,—or are you disillusioned?
 We, as older sisters have a right to ask.

We're confident that we have been examples
 Which you in years to come will still revere,
 That what you make of college in the future
 Will be due to our great inspiration here.

We like to contemplate the years before you
 Knowing what a satisfaction they will be,
 And in parting, would just leave you this suggestion,
 That afternoon's a pleasant time for tea.

To 1933

You were a source of wonderment for us;
 We spent our days in constant speculation—
 Too frivolous, perhaps, too unimpressed?
 These worries caused us endless consternation.

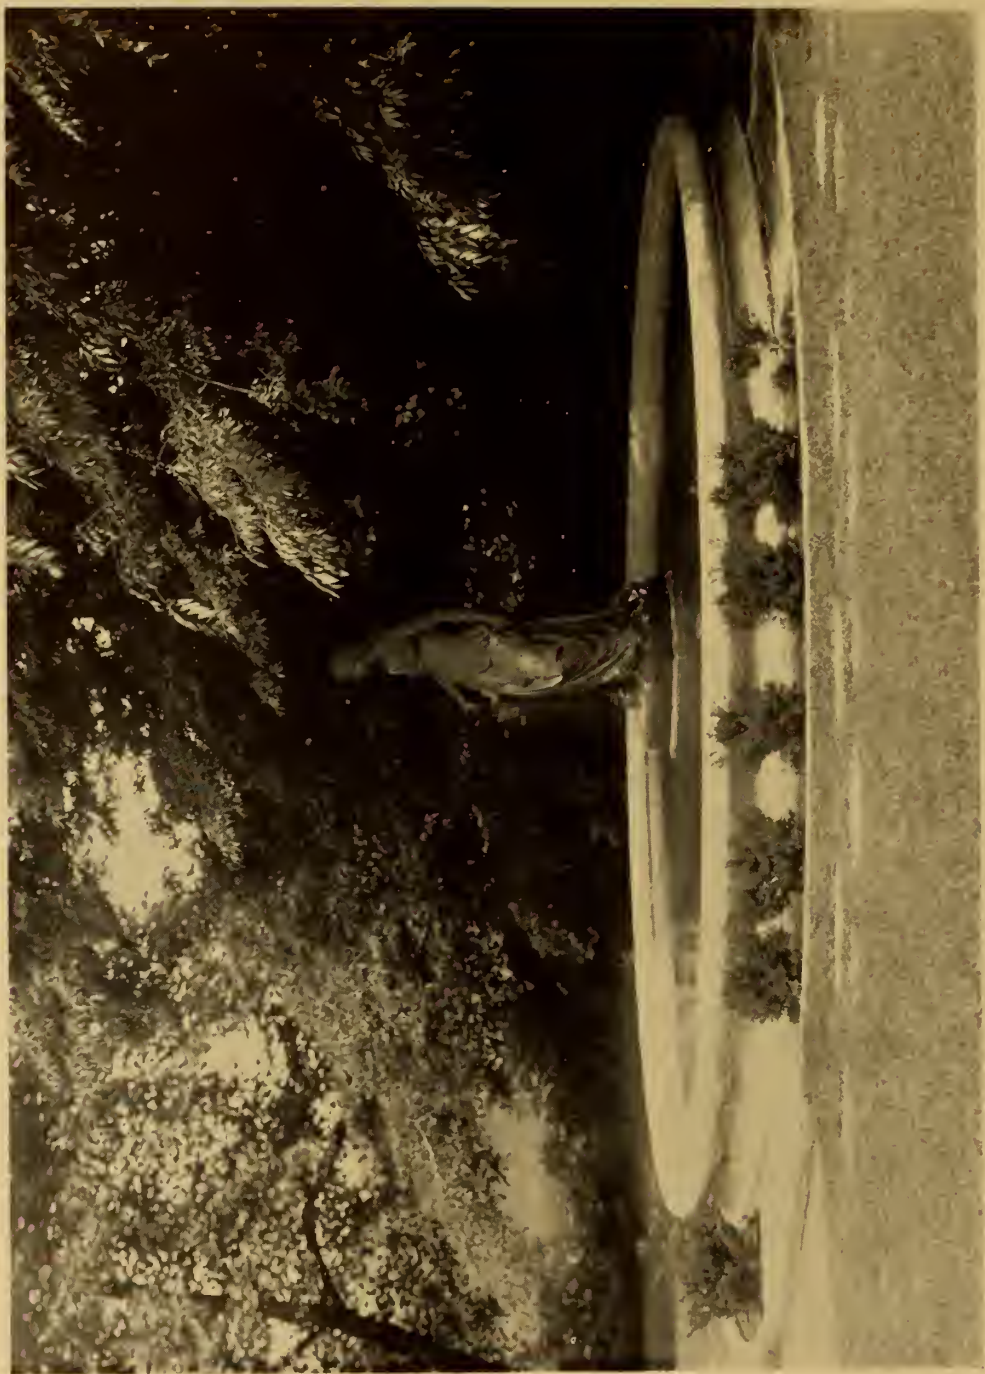

Oh, we applauded when you gained your point,
 Or made a team, or brought us commendation.
 You were the solace of our heavier moods,
 You were the death of serious contemplation.

Perhaps you wondered why we smiled so sadly.
 The time has come to tell the candid truth:
 It isn't that we think you need us badly,
 But only that we envy you your youth.

Dramatics

Most important of this year's events was the Fall production of the Dramatic Association, a revival of Strauss' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier." Nancy Hamilton, as Lieutenant Bumerli, more than adequately proved that the director should be allowed to act, as well as direct, if she is Nancy Hamilton. E. J. Parker's singing as Nadina was a joy that will long be remembered; Eleanor Lamont as Alexius, Lois Hoover as Mascha, and Lorna Macdonnell as the mother, all contributed excellent performances. The verve and spirit of the chorus, the sets, skilfully executed by Virginia Gerould, and an especially lovely dance by Eleanor Atterbury and Esther Peck, resulted in a well rounded and delightful production.

Workshop, in its Fall production, afforded the college an opportunity to see Lord Dunsany's allegory, "The Flight of the Queen," produced for the first time on any stage. The fact that Dunsany had not intended the play for actual production was, we take pride in saying, no deterrent to the ardor and industry of Mr. Eliot's students. The resultant ambitious attempt at staging was admirable in spirit, if not in form. Julia Heiman was excellent as the hero, and praise is also due the performance of Doris Freile as the Queen, and Gertrude Droshnicop as her hand-maid.

This play was preceded by Maeterlinck's symbolic playlet, "The Intruder." Here, as elsewhere, Maeterlinck makes better reading than acting, but the production, although of necessity slow, was successful in capturing the haunting, dreamlike quality of the play itself. Much of this success should be attributed to the gray-toned lighting, the set, with its high arched window, and the effectiveness of a film of gauze hanging between audience and actors.

The customary performance of Miss Burnett's Dance Group was outstanding this year, and the mastery of individual technique shown by the dancers was extraordinary, considering the fact that they are able to devote only an hour a week to this work. Ann Parker's performance was particularly finished. "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," with music by Dukas, was presented for the first time, a fact which added to the prestige of the Dance Group. From first to last, both costumes and sets were admirably done, the former by the students of Mr. Larkin's class, Art 314, and the latter by Vera Mintz and Concetta Bonomo. The lighting in the "Air for the G String" was most effective. The performance as a whole was well worked out, and reflected great credit on Miss Burnett.

In February, we had the pleasure of witnessing a production of "The Beggar on Horseback," presented by the Northampton Players, on the stage at Students' Building. We are always interested in the Northampton Players, and this time our interest was increased by the fact that Mr. Raymond Putman of the Music Department played the leading part, while Mrs. Larkin and Miss Burnett were in the pantomime in the second act. Mr. Putman gave a smooth and convincing interpretation of the harassed young composer, and Mrs. Larkin, as the Weekly said, played the part of the Princess with "ravishing coquetry." Miss Burnett was delightful as the tiring woman. With the usual happy result Mr. Larkin had charge of sets and costuming, and the ingenious expressionism of the scenery aided not a little in bringing out the extremely modernistic theme of the play.

An interesting contrast was found in the two productions, "Apache" and "The Player Queen," by the Theatre Workshop, presented on March 12, in Students' Building. Two very different themes, treated in totally different ways, gave variety to the program.

The first play, "Apache," by Charles Mere, a "shudder drama" from the Gioud Guignol, directed by Sonya Muraven, 1931, and acted by Miriam Ramer, 1933, and Professor René Guiet, was very effective. Professor Guiet interpreted the sinister, under-world "prince" with an ominous restraint, which developed slowly and subtly, until he burst into the mad ferocity of the notorious criminal.

The second performance, "The Player Queen," by William Butler Yeats, produced by Helen Noyes, 1930, was, on the other hand, a fantasy of the usual "far-away princess in a tower" type. The best member of the cast was Julia Heiman, 1932, as the Beggar Who Brays. Valeria Burgess, 1933, as Septimus, was the very drunk, very poetic actor devoted to a white unicorn. The Queen who preferred to be a martyr was acted with the proper child-like simplicity by Dorothy Frandsen, 1933, and Mrs. Ruth Larkin lent her usual verve and piquant animation to the part of Decima who preferred to be a queen.

As the Commencement play the Senior Class is producing, "The Would-Be Gentleman," a three-act farce freely adapted from Molière's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" by F. Anstey. The play is being directed by Samuel A. Eliot Jr. and Oliver W. Larkin is supervising the costumes and the scenery.

The story of the play, which concerns the efforts of a merchant endeavoring to buy his way into the nobility, and the complications which beset him, is too well known to be told here. The cast includes Ailène Slocovich, Edda Renouf, Margaret Goodlatte, Helen Ripley Noyes, Isabel Smith, Betsey Tilden, Eleanor Dowling, Sallie Simons, Elise Phares, Elise Hoster, and Mary Louise Libby. The rôle of the would-be gentleman is being played by Helen Huberth of the class of 1928, who graciously consented to return in order to add one more characterization to her long list.

On the whole, staging has been the most distinctive and original part of this year's work, but there is nowhere room for actual dissatisfaction. The true value of the year's success may be gauged by the renewed interest in dramatics, and the eager anticipation of what the next year may bring forth.

LAST STEP SONG

Tune: "Old German Folk Song"

Words by ELEANOR DOWLING

Alma Mater

Words by HENRIETTA SPERRY, '10

Music by H. D. SLEEPER

To you, O Alma Mater,
O mother great and true,
From all your loyal children
Comes up the song anew.
Where swings the red sun upward,
Where sinks he down to rest,
Are hearts that backward turning
Still find you first and best.

Chorus

And gladly singing to you always
Our loyal hearts with joy shall fill,
O fairest, fairest Alma Mater,
You hold and claim us still.

You gave us dreams unnumbered,
And life we had not known,
And now, O Alma Mater,
We give you back your own.
For memories, for friendships,
That bless each passing day,
Our toil unsought we render,
Our debt unasked we pay.

Chorus

And gladly singing to you always
Our loyal hearts with joy shall fill,
O fairest, fairest Alma Mater,
You hold and claim us still.

I

As to these steps we make our way,
A tribute of farewell we pay.
For we are glad that we have had
The honor to be following you
To stand upon this threshold new.

II

Though pride our hearts does fill with bliss
Still sadness dulls the joy of this Great day of days when we part ways
For you move on to wider spheres,
That wider grow thru all the years.

III

Like pebbles in a rivulet tossed;
The ripples widen, then are lost.
But you add strength the long stream's length
And help it on to reach its end
And give it service of a friend.

IV

The tides have swept you to the bay,
And you sail out o'er life's broadening way.
And from your source along your course
You've brought us friendship's beauty rare
And courage stormy seas to dare.

V

You've given us faith and kindness too
And fostered love that will e'er be true.
You've been our pride, from you we've tried
To learn an upward path to hold,
To face life with strong hearts and bold.

VI

To never our high goal forsake,
And of each failure success to make
You are not gone, you will live on.
We fill our hearts and pledge them deep,
Your memory and your love to keep.

NONSENSE <sup>MP</sup>

Spleen's Short History of Seven Semesters

"The ancients didn't know they were ancients"—neither did we realize that we were a part of a great feudal system, until we were about to graduate. That quotation made us pause and consider. Yes, the whole thing was just a series of petty feuds, raids and alliances. We feel we owe it to future generations to give an account of these—our times, so here it is, a history of the events between the years 1926 and 1930.

This is a political history. Other treatises have treated other phases. The question of, "Who sheltered Learning and preserved the Old Manuscripts while the wars were going on?" is carefully discussed in that tome of tomes The College Catalogue. The religious phase, "What was the influence of the Church?" is consigned to that most pious of productions: The Freshman Bible. We would not presume to encroach upon the toes of the earnest scholars who have presented statements and statistics in various periodicals and Alumnae Quarterlies. This is a political history.

It begins—as all chronicles begin that are concerned with the much-discussed Middle Ages (i. e.—the ages between sixteen and twenty-two), after the fall of the Great Family Umpire. It begins with a great migration — which might be called a crusade,—possibly a pilgrimage, or even possibly, an exploration. As all great movements of history, this one had first to deal with housing conditions. Dilettantes were housed with gourmands, craftsmen with suffragettes, and babies with women-of-the-world. It resulted in a Great Confusion. Individuals, accustomed all their lives to ease and luxury, found it necessary to band together to preserve their social status, and nourish fondly the illusion of aristocracy. Some of the more conspicuous of these bands were, "The Ancient Order of Highbrows," and "The Yellow Men." They surrounded themselves with a moat, and carried on rites with costumes and torches, to the amazement of the lesser orders, who were secretly jealous, and secretly fond of a picturesque aristocracy. Another type of social phenomenon which sprang up was the solid—yet informal Crowd, which existed on polite, but non-conversant terms with the countryside at large. Crowds persisted impregnable throughout the period of encampment, unaffected by external or internal changes, except the occasional dropping away of a member as the result of foreign invasions. These Crowds lent an atmosphere of respectability to the Machinery of Government. They were ever present on Great Occasions, such as Proms and Teas. Such was the Duchy of Havenuss, a small circle in the Center of Things. A map of this period would mark Crowds in red dots, and leave the remainder to be painted blue or green, according to Interests. Maps of these feudal times show many overlappings. The Interest Groups were exceedingly feudal in character,—consisting as they did of lords, vassals and serfs. The serfs were the workers,—they ground, and dug, and crammed. Without them the picturesque societies would have perished. Not that industry counted for much; their work faded in the light of philosophy. "Man knows but little here below." But brilliant young serfs constituted good Acquaintances, and a vassal's estate consisted of many Acquaintanceships. A vassal defended the Lord's Interest.

It would be impossible to mention all of these systems by name. Most prominent were: the Thespian Group, under Sam Riot; the Outlaw Group, under Lady Abby Belledame; and the Curtissy Group. The latter had a splendid code which almost approached the idealism of King Arthur's court, although there were some pretty Green Knights among the Well Read Courtiers. Between these groups there were varying relationships, and occasional skirmishes. Members of the Curtissy Group proved that "the pen is mightier than the hockey stick" in certain unauthorized attacks. The Outlaw Group retired to the woods.

Some of the greatest battles were fought among the vassals of the various groups who had formed other alliances called Clubs. Clubs did little to arbitrate, and a great deal to aggravate Wars of the Interests. Mountebanks and thieves flourished. Mountebanks sold sandwiches and thieves collected class dues.

Mediaeval warfare was carried on incessantly with untold cruelty. Quarrels over lands without natural boundaries (i. e. Double Rooms), resulted in the extermination of the freeholder. One found she could not stand alone. The only thing that kept the system from decaying was the rapid succession of generations to build up the old institutions, and take the place of the slain and wounded.

Oh, glorious time,—oh, divine age of chivalry! No doubt we shall soon look back upon it all through a rosy glow; that period during the Great Plague in 1926, when everyone found a topic of conversation in the prevalent disease, and Rumor brought news of new trench mouth victims at every breath;—the spring of 1928, when fire and flood exceeded each other in ferocity, and instilled mediaeval panic in all hearts. One lived in perpetual excitement.

Visiting players furnished variation in the way of entertainment. Perhaps some future Chaucer was entertained by the Denishawn Dancers, Cornelia Skinner, or Judge Ben Lindsay—who knows? Or, if pleasure irked one, there was always the War of Science and Religion, which was glad of new recruits. One might join either the forces of the Great God Barnes, or of the Honorable Patch. Everyone lived a Full, Rich, and Beautiful Life, saddened only by the knowledge that the Renaissance would soon knock her castles down. (Renaissance is an inspired term for Commencement). But we need not have worried. Many of us will continue to live mediaeval lives wherever we happen to be; to wage war against people whose opinions we do not understand, and to carry the Spirit of the Dark Ages far beyond the limits of a college campus.

Feminist

Matters political
 Make one so critical
 Thoughtful and practical
 Shrewd and pragmatical
 Quite patriotic
 Partial and cynical!
 Problems so ethical
 Seem enigmatical;
 What is a voter to do?
 Am I a radical
 Wild and fanatical
 Or an intractible
 Stable standpatical?
 Tell me instancial
 I am quite frantical—
 Which one becomes me most,
 Red, white or blue?

Secret Society

Say, campus has a certain clique,
 I wonder if you've seen them, too;
 They're not particularly chic
 Nor well-to-do,
 But yet unique.
 They have an air
 Of savoir faire
 And "we-belong-here," so to speak.

I envy them indeed because
 They work together quite a lot.
 Last Saturday, I guess it was,
 Or maybe not—
 Oh, yes it was—
 It just occurred
 To me, "Absurd
 That we can't do what this crowd does."

They have their fun; one drives a car
 That holds them all when they go out—
 Not that they ever travel far—
 They sing about
 "How dry we are,"
 In unison;
 Does anyone
 Still wonder who these gangsters are?

I've seen them walking down the street
 Abreast with shovels on their backs;
 They always make the campus neat
 And clear the tracks
 Of snow and sleet—
 In fall, it's leaves,
 One rakes, one heaves,
 And gets them out from under feet.

The shovel army digs the beds,
 Or dredges Paradise at times;
 They have more use for level heads,
 Than making rimes.
 They work in sheds,
 They heave the coal;
 And there's a hole
 That serves as club when night descends.

There was a great deal of nonsense that we wanted to insert in this page which, though it had little to do with the college, had, none the less, been written down in the classroom. For instance, the following came straight from Mr. Rice's class in 18th century literature:

It seems difficult to suppose, that the hale and hearty
 Josie,
 Could be anything but rosey, but you see,
 Her maid's blush was only painting, that her cheek
 was always tainting,
 And she could not help her fainting at a tea.

Then one day amid the teacups,
 she was pestered with the heccups,
 And she quickly shattered
 three cups with her jerking.
 When she saw what she had shattered, and how much
 those teacups mattered,
 Her ability was flattered into working.

If a heccups case exposes, three such exquisite Limoges,
 To destruction, it disposes one to be set
 By a strange and haunting mooning, to see if a fit of swooning,
 Will not finish up by ruining a whole tea set.

So she took up her position, to the doorway to the kitchen.
 When the servant brought the dish in, she'd be ready.
 For she knew the sight of China
 (everywhere but in a diner),
 (If expensive, that much finer!) made her heady.

With a full faint cry of "Hooray!" as the tray came through the doorway,
 She crashed headlong to the floorway, as the plates flew far and wide.
 When from her fit she'd woken, not a dish of them was broken,
 "Pullman cups! We just were joking," said the host, but Josie'd died.

And of course, that leads us straight to:

Mercy, Percy, how red you look,

You must have been reading a naughty book!

But that is not quite original. We must admit we spend a great deal of time in the classroom, inscribing that different ways on our scratchpad, just as "How now, brown cow" has come to find a home in many of our note-books, but they are neither of them original, nor yet part of the professor's lectures. And that's final.

The other day we took a stroll about the campus and got the consensus of opinion about the class. The following are the result of careful thinking and honorable voting, and if we'd had time, we could probably have gotten up a good football Eleven.

Most Simple—Simons seems to have this, but simply because of the nursery rhymes.

Craziest about Boys—Boies, of course. And why not?

Most whimsical—Margot Johnson stuffed the ballot on this one.

Most exotic—Nancy Hamilton wins this hands down; in fact she won't humiliate the rest of the college by putting it to a vote.

Most Human—(Very soon we are going to stop playing games with Ella's name, but really it's such a temptation.)

Most likely to succeed—Heigh-ho. We think Herbie Hoover and Lindbergh about tie on this one.

Comparative Anatomy

My dear, I declare, your most excellent car
 Has the low-swinging lines of a dinosaur.
 It runs quite as smoothly, it growls and it jumps,
 And behaves just exactly their way when it bumps.

Sometimes I have wondered in self righteous rage
 If we have progressed from the Jurassic Age,
 And if this is progress;—the life is not bad,
 But it takes no more brains than the dinosaur had.

The traffic is terrible—look at the deaths:—

On campus we're busy just catching our breaths.
 Some time in the future
 (this cannot be hid)
 We will kill off each other.
 (The dinosaurs did.)

PSYCHOZOIC

No, I have no car up this spring, some omission
 Prevented my getting a driving permission.

When the President of Student Council walks in on your mid-morning cigarette—Be nonchalant—Light another.
